

Thought!

Hi, Fred Nelson for Community Comment,

My fellow commentators are thoughtful thinkers, thinking thoughtful thoughts while thoughtfully trying to avoid thoughtlessness that is preceded by lack of thought. Thinking thoughtful thoughts tends to keep one from thinking bad thoughts, paving the way for lighter thoughts. Serious thinking, as thinking goes, is also thought to be beneficial to those thinkers who do have the ambition to thoughtfully think that they want to be a successful thinker in today's world. Thoughtfully preparing their thoughts over a two week thinking period prior to airing their thoughts on K.I.N.S. (a thoughtful station for allowing us to air our thoughts), each commentator thinks hard about the subject matter and thinks that carefully thought out remarks will not only enlighten the thinking public but may, in some thoughtful way, help the individual citizen to be a bit more thoughtful, a thoughtful way to help those with lack of thought. Thoughtful thinking helps the thinker to think on a higher plane. In spite of all this thinking, there are those listeners, who, no matter what the thinking, will think lesser thoughts meaning a lack of thought leading to complete thoughtlessness. A thoughtless listener, no matter what he or she thinks or does not think, is thought by us thoughtful commentators to be wasting their thoughtless time listening to our thoughtful thoughts. There are those days, I think, that we might lack some thoughts or thoughtfulness while striving to write down thoughts to be thoughtfully aired, but, I think, we all have our bad days when thinking is difficult especially when we think that our thinking might be obscured by sickness which we unthinkingly picked up from a thoughtless exposure to some thoughtless person who thought that there was nothing wrong with them. To those non thinkers I say "Think again". Think of the problems that you have unthinkingly passed on to those who thought that you were a thoughtful person, not a non-thinker. Not only do us thoughtful commentators have the challenge of thoughtfully writing down and arranging our thoughts, we then have to think about the most thoughtful route to use when driving to the radio station to air our thoughts. Thoughtless hazards abound on Eureka's thoroughfares unthinkingly provided by unthinking drivers who, with no thought, run stop signs while they are probably thinking about subject matter that they just thought of, or they thoughtlessly use their cell phones without thinking of the serious consequences thoughtlessness can bring. No matter the excellence of driving qualities possessed, the driver who does not control his thoughts is just as dangerous as the one who has a complete lack of thought. Concentrate on the thoughts of driving while behind the wheel while thoughtfully placing your other thoughts in reserve. If you think that this commentary is full of useless thoughts from a non-thinker, you might be right but give it a bit more thought before you make a thoughtful decision.

Fred Nelson for Community Comment: (I think)