Well, Peggy Noonan is back in the news. She writes in the raw Wall Street Journal that the state of the Union speech was a spectacle of delusion and self congratulation in which a Congress nobody likes rose to chair a president nobody really likes. She says that it marked the continued degeneration of a great and useful tradition. Viewership was down to the lowest level since the year 2000.

For those of you who watched the show you could see that every cabinet level office holder marched in shaking hands with high-fiving breathless Congressman. Those Congressman have the power, according to Ms. Noonan to basically destroy your life by declaring the house you just built is in violation of the EPA wetland regulations, to prohibit your child from getting a school voucher and to define your medical coverage.

Ms. Noonan goes on to write and basically says that Congress has separated itself from us who they call the folks. You know, we are the ones that keep electing these people so that they can live off of our taxpaying dollars. The polls show that the president's popularity is underwater and the same appears to be true for Congress she goes on to say that meanwhile back in America religious groups are fighting Obama care. Many of these groups are providing vast services to the poor and needy but it's against their beliefs to follow some of the provisions of Obama care. These little sisters of the poor who run 30 homes for the needy around this country have been told that they must comply with the Obama care mandate that all insurance coverage include contraceptive, sterilization procedures and morning after pills and if they don't, and she says, and of course they can't, being Catholic and nuns, they will face ruinous fines. This case is now before the Supreme Court. I wish them all the luck in the world.

I leave you with a point to ponder: don't you think that we need to elect public officials who will respond to the calls and cries of the public, you know the ones who pay their salary?

There is too much social justice, what in my opinion is socialism. We don't want to become another Rome where socialism did not work,
