A good friend of mine sent me an email a few days ago and the subject of his letter was conundrum. The definition of that word is something that is puzzling or confusing and then he lists six conundrums of socialism in the United States of America.

Number one America^{is} capitalist and greedy, yet half of the population is subsidize.

Number two half of the population is subsidized yet they think they are victims.

Number three they think they are victims yet their representatives run the government.

Number four their representatives run the government yet the poor keep getting poorer.

Number five the poor keep getting poorer yet they have things that people in other countries only dream about.

Number six they have things that people in other countries only dream about and yet they want America to be more like those other countries.

His email went on to state what is the direction of our current government and cultural environment.

First he says we are advised to not judge all Muslims by the actions of a few lunatics, but we are encouraged to judge all gun owners by the actions of a few lunatics.

Secondly he says that we constantly hear from our government about how Social Security is going to run out of money but we never hear about welfare or food stamps^{is} running out of money and what is interesting is that Social Security was paid for by working people but welfare and food stamps^{is} a gift.

Thirdly he asked the question why is the government cutting benefits for veterans and no pay raises for our military and now cutting our army to a level lower than before World War II, but we are not stopping the payments or benefits to illegal aliens when he talks about gun ownership he says that a gun is like a parachute. If you need one and don't have one you'll probably never need one again.

I leave you with a point to ponder are you shaking your head and saying to yourself am I the only one missing something?
