I wanted to have a little fun today and talk about roadsigns ~~in~~ in this wonderful state of ours.

We just made two separate trips to Santa Rosa this last month and of course the roadwork is unbelievable. There are those orange cones everywhere. It is so prolific that I have petitioned Caltrans to change the name of our highway from the Redwood Highway to the cone Highway.

You ^{have} all seen the roadsigns and the one that jumps out at me every time is the one that says Road work ahead and so you slow down but there are no workers. Where are they?

The other sign I like is the one that says ~~bump~~ ahead but they forgot to tell me about the bump behind and the bumps everywhere.

For those of you who are in my age bracket or older will remember the Burma-Shave signs that lined our two-way highways in years gone by here are some that stand out in my memory: a man, a miss, a curve, he kissed the miss and missed the curve.

He saw the train and tried to duck it, he kicked the gas and then the bucket.

Don't stick your elbow out so far because it may go home in another car.

Don't lose your head to gain a minute. You need your head your brains are in it.

as you know A guy who drives a car wide open is not thinking, he's just hoping for the millenials - As you travel down I'm sure you have experienced the same frustration that I have when you come upon a rest area where it is marked closed with the next rest area being 31 miles ahead. And then they tell you that you cannot park alongside the highway except for an emergency. Well because of that closed rest area you may have an emergency.

Part of the ^{road} problem has been that the gasoline tax that has always been designated to keep our roads in good shape has obviously been diverted to other governmental uses which leads me into the fact that both our state and federal governments are too big. Iran takes our citizens hostage and we give them $400 million as ransom. Our administration says that it was not ran some but just a payback of money that we owed that country. Now it is revealed by the Obama administration that we have given Iran over $3 billion this year. This is a country that is volatile in nature and hates America. It has nuclear ambitions and the restrictions that we have placed upon them do not work. They will not let us inspect the areas and their country ~~that~~ ^{might} need the inspection.

When I read about what our government is doing I am reminded of that statement that Tom Hanks made in forest Gump. He said stupid is as stupid does.

I leave you with a point to ponder: don't you think that our Congress should interject into more of what the administration of this country is doing and protect this great country of ours.
